The Political Fiction

Chapter 1 by Eklavyus

"Stories are only stories, figments of imagination, This can't be true" She said in rejection. It was seen before, people call it by many names, Karma, Circle of Life, Justice, He responded in affirmation.

We need necessary evil to even things out, to make them accountable. We need fear to make people believe again.

Chapter 2 by Kitiōn

Fear brings need, and need brings loyalty. Only the winners write history, and we must make sure that we hold the pen.

Chapter 3 by intellikat

"Okay, okay, fine," she capitulated. "But if I'm going to be the sidekick, I expect that my costume is of the same quality as yours."

"Of course, of course," he said. "We're ordering them all from China. Bulk order so we will always have enough."

Chapter 4 by Ian

"Power comes from conjuring something for people to fear and from holding out the promise of making it go away. Sometimes it's other races or religions, sometimes the evil intentions of other nations, or sometimes in the same nation, the same story. Then you'll be able to see the same book at any national library. See more of Story Wars » or View all books

So I am going to create a mad, dangerous and seditious cult and you are going to spend the next 30 years almost, but not quite bringing it down.

Now stop asking questions and put on that cassock."
